this book maps the interactions between informal workers and the law within the urban and spatial environment it focuses on access to physical space revealing the punitive ways in which law regulates space and informal work which relies on space across various cities worldwide the chapters in this book uncover how informal workers remain at the policy and legal margins of urban society and reveal their ongoing endeavour for social and legal protection within local jurisdictional contexts it spans multiple themes ranging from street vending to informal work in the gig economy they shed light on the collective influence of the law and the pursuit of a modern city in contributing to the marginalisation of informal workers despite this the chapters illuminate the strategies employed by informal workers to leverage the law in acknowledging their contributions and asserting their presence in the city the book is targeted towards an academic audience and practitioners specialising in law urban studies and the informal economy the reader will gain an in depth and cross jurisdictional understanding of the indispensable role played by informal workers in providing services to a broader urban population ranging from street vendors to sanitation workers and sex workers examining street vending as a global urban and informalized practice found both in the global north and global south this volume presents contributions from international scholars working in cities as diverse as berlin dhaka new york city los angeles calcutta rio de janeiro and mexico city the aim of this global approach is to repudiate the assumption that street vending is usually carried out in the southern hemisphere and to reveal how it also represents an essential and constantly growing economic practice in urban centers of the global north although street vending activities vary due to local specificities this anthology illustrates how these urban practices can also reveal global ties and developments street vending represents a significant share of the urban informal economy poverty and high levels of unemployment in nairobi city have seen the number of women street vendors increase as they take up street trading as a means of survival and a livelihood strategy however there is limited understanding about the socio economic characteristics of the women vendors challenges they experience and the effects of the regulatory framework on their activity this study used a human rights perspective to examine the situation of women street vendors because policies dealing with street trading should be based explicitly on the norms and values set out in the international law of human rights so as to promote and protect the rights of women street vendors data was collected from women street vendors who were selected from the streets using interview schedules while interview guides gathered data from key informants in the public and private sectors data analysis employed quantitative techniques on the questionnaires and hypothesis testing and qualitative methods for content analysis like other big city school systems chicago s has been repeatedly reformed over the last century yet its schools have fallen far short of citizens expectations and left a gap between the performances of white and minority students many blame the educational establishment for resisting change other critics argue that reform occurs too often still others claim it comes not often enough dorothy shipp's reappraises the tumultuous history of educational progress in chicago revealing that the persistent lack of improvement is due not to the extent but rather the type of reform throughout the twentieth century managerial reorganizations initiated by the business community repeatedly altered the governance structure of schools as well as the relationships of teachers to children and parents but brought little improvement while other more promising reform models were either resisted or crowded out shipp's chronicles how chicago s corporate actors led abetted or restrained nearly every attempt to transform the city s school system then asks whether schools might be better reformed by others to show why city schools have failed urban children so badly she traces chicago's reform history over four political eras revealing how corporate power was instrumental in designing and revamping the system her narrative encompasses the formative era of 1880-1930 when teachers unions moderated business plans previously unexplored business activism from 1930 to 1980 when civil rights dominated school reform and the decentralization of the 1980s she also covers the uneasy cooperation among business associations in the 1990s to install the mayor as head of the school system a governing regime now challenged by privatization advocates business people may be too wedded to a stunted view of educators to forge a productive partnership for change unionized teachers bridle at the second class status accorded them by managers if reform is to reach deeply into classrooms shipp concludes it might well require a new coalition of teachers unions and parents to create a fresh agenda that supersedes corporate interests this study clearly shows that in chicago as elsewhere urban schooling is intertwined with politics and power by reviewing more than a century of corporate efforts to make education work shipp makes a strong case that it's high time to look elsewhere perhaps to educators themselves for new leadership
