This ground-breaking research explores language maintenance and shift focusing on a school community following students' language practice inside and outside of school. The author offers a full picture of students' multilingual practices and their role in shaping identity using case studies of eight girls from Vietnamese and Cambodian backgrounds. The book draws on data from questionnaires, interviews, and ethnographic observation to bring these language practices to life. It explores the place of heritage languages, English, and other languages in the girls' repertoires and investigates the role they see for these languages in their lives. A key focus of the book is the role of the school environment in shaping students' repertoires and unfolding sense of ethnic identity, both directly through formal instruction and indirectly through its ethos and social composition. It provides practical suggestions on the basis of extensive research for how schools can negotiate some of the challenges of catering to a multiethnic population. Essential reading for anyone researching migrant language practice, sociolinguistics, or multicultural education.

Australia's English raises many questions among experts and the general public: what is it like? How has English changed by being transplanted to other parts of the world? Does the rise of AUSE and other varieties endanger the role of English as a world language? Past studies have often been selective, focusing on the esoteric and non-typical and ignoring the contact situation in which Australian English has developed. This book and its companion, Australia's Many Voices: Ethnic Englishes, Indigenous and Migrant Languages, Policy and Education, develop and apply a comprehensive and integrative approach that anchors English in the entire habitat of Australia's languages that it both upset and transformed based on a wide range of data and on the assumption that all manifestations of Australian English must cohere as a system. This book retraces the social, psycholinguistic, and linguistic history of the language; it locates the contact with indigenous and migrant languages and with American English in the appropriate sociohistorical context and shows how several layers of migration have shaped it as it stratified. It was gradually accepted and developed into a fully fledged national variety or epicentre of English that could be raised to the status of national language. Implications on educational policy and attempts to reach out into the Asia-Pacific region have followed logically from national status. The study is of interest for specialists of English and Australian studies as well as a range of other disciplines. Its discursive, non-technical style and presentation makes it accessible to non-specialists with no background in linguistics.

linguistics is a subject that has remained largely confined to the academy rather than being integrated into school curricula this is unfortunate but not surprising as although some teacher education programs include courses on linguistics it is not comprehensively integrated into teacher education so it is largely absent from the curriculum this volume brings together a team of leaders in the field of linguistics and education to provide an overview of the current state of research and practice it demonstrates changes which can be made to teaching such as revising teacher s preparation developing and implementing practical applications of linguistics in both primary and secondary classrooms partnering linguists with classroom teachers and working to improve state and national education standards the contributors emphasize the importance of collaboration between professional linguists and educators in order to meet a common goal to raise awareness of the workings of language human history has been characterised by the movement of peoples from one part of the world to another the current tendency towards globalisation has accentuated this movement while the proliferation of economic ties and the speed of travel and communication have made the world a much smaller place any particular location within the world is now faced with an increasing degree of contact between cultures and languages migrating people bring with them languages in various stages of planning with differing status and with differing relationships to their personal and group identity the present study explores the ways in which three immigrant communities have adjusted and adapted to a new setting in australia and the ways in which the host community has contributed to this process it focuses specifically on the ways in which patterns of language use contribute to the maintenance of a pre migration identity and or the negotiation of a new one the languages chosen for this research are macedonian filipino tagalog and somali
