in the paradox of representation david lublin offers an unprecedented analysis of a vast range of rigorous empirical evidence that exposes the central paradox of racial representation racial redistricting remains vital to the election of african americans and latinos but makes congress less likely to adopt policies favored by blacks lublin s evidence together with policy recommendations for improving minority representation will make observers of the political scene reconsider the avenues to fair representation using data on all representatives elected to congress between 1972 and 1994 lublin examines the link between the racial composition of a congressional district and its representative s race as well as ideology the author confirms the view that specially drawn districts must exist to ensure the election of african americans and latinos he also shows however that a relatively small number of minorities in a district can lead to the election of a representative attentive to their interests when african americans and latinos make up 40 percent of a district according to lublin s findings they have a strong liberalizing influence on representatives of both parties when they make up 55 percent the district is almost certain to elect a minority representative lublin notes that particularly in the south the practice of concentrating minority populations into a small number of districts decreases the liberal influence in the remaining areas thus a handful of minority representatives almost invariably democrats win elections but so do a greater number of conservative republicans the author proposes that establishing a balance between majority minority districts and districts where the minority population would be slightly more dispersed making up 40 percent of a total district would allow more african americans to exercise more influence over their representatives this work provides a rational framework for legislation the unifying premise behind the essays is that although legislation and regulation are the result of a political process legislation and regulation can be the object of theoretical study the volume focuses on problems that are common to most European legal systems and the approach involves applying to legislative problems the tools of legal theory hence jurisprudence whereas traditional legal theory deals predominantly with the application of law by the judge jurisprudence enlarges the field of study so as to include the creation of law by the legislator the original essays published in this collection expose and develop a range of new insights into the relationship between legislative problems and legal theory in a way which will engage and interest legal scholars throughout the world
